

Law changes end-of-life procedure (The Myrtle Beach Sun News)

Contributed by Webmaster
Tuesday, 02 October 2007
Last Updated Tuesday, 02 October 2007

A new law taking effect Monday requires doctors or other health providers to sign a form on which patients state whether they want medical treatment withdrawn when they are near death. The law was approved after heated discussions this year in the General Assembly. Supporters say the law makes conveying a patient's end-of-life decisions easier, but opponents say the procedure is weighted toward ...

New Laws Take Effect (WITN 7 North Carolina)
October 1 saw several new laws hit the books across the state.

Chiropractor Practice Marketing Strategies

New Laws Take Effect Oct. 1 Affecting Life, Solar Panels (WSOC-TV Charlotte)
A new law taking effect Monday requires doctors or other health providers to sign a form on which patients state whether they want medical treatment withdrawn when they are near death.